Southern Railway's Historic Spencer Shops (Images Of Rail)

Synopsis

Southern Railway's Spencer Shops was a vibrant part of the Southeast's transportation network for more than 80 years. Starting in the late 1800s and continuing until its closure in 1979, the shop complex and its accompanying yards, transfer sheds, and stockyards constituted a major force in the economy of North Carolina and Southern states. The trains that the shop prepared were hauling everyday freight—Appalachian lumber, Piedmont textiles, and perishables—or were famous passenger trains like the Crescent, the Peach Queen, and many more. Others were more notable, such as the locomotive in the folk ballad “The Wreck of the Old 97” or President Roosevelt's funeral train in 1945. The Spencer Shops was an industrial power whose prominence today is celebrated in its continued role as the home to the North Carolina Transportation Museum. This book tells the story of how Spencer Shops came to be, its role in transportation, and its continued use today as a North Carolina Historic Site.

Title: New book illustrates Spencer Shops' history Author: Staff Writer Publisher:

salisburypost.com Date: 7/22/2011 A new pictorial history features more than 200 vintage images of Southern Railway's Spencer Shops, from its beginning to the final days in the 1970s. Once Southern Railway's largest repair facility between Washington and Atlanta, Spencer Shops has been transformed today into the N.C. Transportation History Museum. The book will be available

Aug. 8 at local bookstores, independent retailers, online retailers and through its publisher, Arcadia Publishing. Retail price is $21.99. Larry K. Neal Jr., chief of museum operations and education at Spencer Shops, authored the publication, which also includes a foreword by Jim Wrinn, editor of Trains magazine. According to a press release from Arcadia, Southern Railway's Historic Spencer Shops covers through images the creation of Spencer Shops and the town of Spencer, steam and diesel locomotive repair and operation, the people of Spencer Shops and the operation's final years. "This book tells the story of how Spencer Shops came to be, its role in transportation and its continued use today as a N.C. historic site," Arcadia says in the press release. "The trains that the shop prepared were hauling everyday freight like Appalachian lumber, Piedmont textiles and perishables or were famous passenger trains like the Crescent, the Peach Queen and many more. Others were more notable, such as the locomotive in the folk ballad 'The Wreck of the Old 97' or President Roosevelt's funeral train in 1945. Spencer Shops operated for roughly 80 years, from the late 1800s to its closure in 1979. For much of that period, it was Rowan County's largest employer. The shop complex and its accompanying yards, transfer sheds and stockyards comprised a major economic engine for the region. Photographs for this book come from numerous sources, including the N.C. Division of Archives and History, Rowan Museum Inc., J. Marvin Black, Marvin Rogers, Vernon Lane, Patsy McBride, Bill Rabon and June Pryor. Photographers who shot many of the images include David P. Driscoll, C.K. Marsh and David Patton. Southern Railway's Historic Spencer Shops is part of Arcadia's Images of America series, which since its launch in 1993 has aimed at preserving and sharing histories of hundreds of communities in the country. The series has expanded through the years to include regional historical topics, examining things such as transportation, industry, architecture and ethnic groups. Southern Railway's Historic Spencer Shops, $21.99, Arcadia Publishing. Available Aug. 8 at local retailers, online bookstores or through Arcadia Publishing at www.arcadiapublishing.com or 888-313-2665.

Larry K. Neal Jr. writes on behalf of the North Carolina Transportation Museum, which, with its affiliated nonprofit, the North Carolina Transportation Museum Foundation, is dedicated to preserving the moving stories of people on the go in the Tar Heel State.

Wonderful history of Spencer Shops

Great book for model railroader to use for model building.

Great book describing the history of Southern Railway's Spencer Shops. The book has excellent black and white photos of Southern Railway steam and diesel locomotives as well as freight and passenger trains like The Crescent. Great book for those people interested in Southern Railway. I own this book and bought it at Phoenix Public Library for 25 cents.
